Required Change:	Please can after signing in redirect to the Personal Info Page rather than just the dashboard. When signing in for the first time.
Issue Two:

A modal window is open over the page, asking the user what Tale is for. The options are: "Tale is for..." (radio button), "storytelling" (radio button), "books" (radio button), "reading" (radio button), "knowledge" (radio button), and "creators" (radio button). The main sign-up form on the right has fields for "Your email" (with placeholder "email@site.com") and "Password" (with placeholder "8+ characters required"). There are "Forgot Password?" and "Log in" buttons below the password field. At the bottom, there's a link "Don't have an account yet? Sign up here".
Issue

Issue	Home Page after sign in header is incorrect. The correct one is with the page sliders that show articles. The sequence of these should be most recently published for people to see their own work being showcased

Issues	The welcome to Tale sign/login pages: the image is a bit small and the tale logo is sitting weird on the side on all kinds of devices.

	The pricing page still asks users to sign up even though they have logged in already.
	Can new users be reminded to pick a plan because this is vital for the ecommerce side of Tale.
